

February 26, 2010

Donna Rice Hughes
Enough is Enough
746 Walker Road, Suite 116
Great Falls, VA 22066

Dear Donna,

It is my pleasure to write a letter in support of Enough is Enough and your work in helping to protect children on the Internet. Enough is Enough has worked diligently over the years to combat potential risks to children online so that they may take advantage of the overwhelming opportunities the Internet affords.

Helping to keep children safe on the Internet is an ever increasing challenge as the Internet continues to grow and evolve into an anywhere, anytime platform. Industry and advocacy groups alike have recognized that two factors are essential to keeping kids safe online: parental involvement and parental controls. Enough is Enough's Internet Safety 101 program captures this through an easy-to-use, easy-to-understand program that educates, empowers, and equips parents and other caregivers with basic safety rules and software tools (Rules 'N Tools).

AOL has been involved in your Internet Safety 101 training program from initial development through the national launch. And, we have witnessed firsthand the positive reception it has received from industry, educators, law enforcement and parents. It is imperative the Internet Safety 101 program moves forward and reaches broad distribution so that parents everywhere to take advantage of the valuable safety resource.

As a company that has long been a pioneer in helping families stay safe online, AOL supports the work of Enough is Enough and the Internet Safety 101<sup>SM</sup> program. We look forward to collaborating with Enough is Enough in your continued efforts.

Sincerely,

Holly M. Hawkins
Director, Consumer Policy and Child Safety
AOL, Inc.